THE MADISONIAN.

VOL III.-NO. 16.

WASHINGTON CITY, WEDN ESDAY, OCTOBER 9, 1839.

EVANS'S CAMOMILE & APERIENT PILLS:

and another impostor has introduced into Pennsylvania, &c., a spurious article, purporting to be Paris Soothering Syrup, for children when cutting teeth—both of which are deleterious counterfeits. Therefore, in order to protect the public against the inroads of such impositions, and to secure them the benefit which his Genuine Medicines never fail in beatowing, he has caused the label of Evans' Camomile &c. Pills, "to be entered ac cording to act of Congress."

A notice of which entry is printed on the labels on every bottle of the Genuine Pills, and he has caused the name of Dr. J. L. Paris to be stricken out of the label on his celebrated Soothing Syrup, for children when cutting teeth, so that the label of the genuine syrup reads an infallible remedy for the pain and sickness to which children are subject when cutting teeth, tested and approved by thousands of mothers and nurses, who have by its early application, not only prevented their children from suffering excrutiating pain, but in many instances rescued them from death.

"DR. WM. EVANS' SOOTHING SYRUP,"

If Be particular in examining the labels, and also in knowing that Dr. Evans never vends any of his medicine save through the medium of his resident agents, as advertised throughout the Union, or at his Western office, Lou isville, Ky., and his principal office, 100 Chatham street New York, where wholesale orders will be promptly executed on the most liberal terms.

If The public may rest assured that in every instance that comes within the knowledge of Dr. Evans, or any of his agents, where the Counterfeit Medicines are purchased or vended, he will give them the earliest public notice of the imposition. Already have proceedings both civil and criminal been instituted against several Drug gists who have been detected, and their names will be laid before the public at an early date. The best protection he can offer for the present is, to caution purchasers to obtain his Medicines from the Agents only.

CELEBRATED FEMALE PILLS.

CELEBRATED FEMALE PILLS.

These Pills are strongly recommended to the notice of the Ladies as a safe and efficient remedy in removing those complaints peculiar to their sex, from want of exercise, or general debility of the system, obstructions, suppressions, and irregularity of the menses; at the same time, strengthening, cleansing, and giving tone to the sto mach and bowels, and producing a new and healthy action throughout the system generally. They create appetite, correct indigestion, remove giddiness and those complaints which distress females so much at the "turn of life." They obviate costiveness, and counteract all hysterical and nervous affections, likewise afford soothing and permanent relief in fluor albus, and in the most obstinate cases of chlorosis, or green sickness, they invariably restore the pallid and delicate female to health and vigor. These Pills have gained the sunction and approbation of the most eminent physicians in the United States, and many mothers can likewise testify to their extraordinary efficacy. To married females, whose expectations of the tenderest pledges of connubial happiness have been defeated, these Pills may be truly estecmed a blissful boon. They soon renovate all functional debility, and if taken according to directions, obviate all morbid action.

Dr. Goode's Celebrated Female Pills—are for all

Dr. Goode's Celebrated Female Pills-are for all

Dr. Goode's Celebrated Female Pills—are for all the following diseases: Suppression. irregularity or retention of the menses, fluor albus, chlorosis or green sickness, costiveness, gravel, incontinence of urine, nervous affections, hysterics, prolapsus uteri, or falling of the womb, and piles; also, pains in the side, chest, limbs, head, stomach or back; dimness, or confusion of sight; alternate flushes of heat and chillness; tremors; watchings; agitation; anxiety; bad dreams and spasms. This medicine is acknowledged to be one of the most valuable ever discovered as a purifier of the blood and fluids; it is superior to sarsaparilla, whether as a sudorific or alterative.

The blood has hitherto been considered by empyrics and others, as the great regulator of the human system, and such is the devotedness of the adherents to that erroneous doctrine, that they content themselves with the simple possession of this fallacious opinion, without inquiring into the primary sources from whence life, health and vigor emanate, and vice versa, pain, sickness, disease and death. Not so with Dr. Hunt, whose extensive research and practical experience so eminently qualify him for the profession of which he has been one of the most useful members. He contends—and a moment's reflection will convince any reasoning mind of the correctness of his views—that the stomach, liver, and the associated organs are the primary and great regulators of health, and that the blood in very many instances is dependent on these organs, and that unless medicine reaches the root of the disease, the superficial anodynes usually prescribed, serve but to cover the ravages of deeprooted maladies. Under these convictions, at the expense of years of close application, the doctor has discovered a medicine whose searching powers are irresistible, and in prescribing, it is with a knowledge of its being a wedged uses in the with a knowledge of its being a wedged uses in the search of the corrections of the being very large in the with a knowledge of its being a wedged uses in the search of the corrections in the decorrections of the being very large that the search whose searching powers are irresistible, and in prescribing, it is with a knowledge of its being a wedged uses in the search of the corrections.

- From the Connecticut Journal.

THE DEATH OF THE FLOWERS. O, who can see the flowers decay, And never heave a sigh, That all that's beautiful on earth, Must lade away and die.

Some on the morning's balmy air, Their cheering fragrance cast, But when the noon-day sun shines forth, Their hour of life is past.

Some glory in the sun's bright beams, And in his radiance glow. But when the chilling night wind comes, Their laded forms lie low.

Some, when the hour of noon is past, Court evening's gentle breath; But ere the morning light appears, They too will sleep in death.

Some pass away on spring's soft air, As fearful to remain, Lest summer's fierce and sultry rays, Should their pure blossoms stain.

Some linger on through summer hours, As louth to leave our sight, But in the first rude autumn blast, They find the fatal blight. Some, amid autumn's fading hues, Do proudly rear their head; But when stern winter shows his face, They're numbered with the dead.

They are all gone, forever gone, The flowers we loved to tend, Mementos each of life's bright joys, So soon to bave an end.

O, who can see the flowers decay, And never heave a sigh, That all that's beautiful on earth, Must fade away and die.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE ORPHAN. About forty years ago, a post chaise was sight more novel in the little hamlet of Thorndean, than silk gowns in country churches, during the maidenhood of our great grandmothers, and, as one drew up at the only public house in the village, the inhabitants, young and old, startled by the unusual and merry sound of its wheels, hurried to the street. The landlady, on the first notice of its approach, had hastily bestowed upon her goodly person the additional recommendation of a clean cap and apron; and, still tying the apron strings, ran burstling to the door, smiling, coloring, and courtesying, and courtesying and coloring again, to the yet unopened chaise. Poor soul! she knew not well how to behave—it was an epoch in her annals of innkeeping. At length the coachman, opening the door, handed out a lady in widow's weeds; a beautiful, golden haired child, apparently not exceeding five years of age, sprang to the ground without assistance, and grasped her extended hand. "What an image o' beauty!" exclaimed some half dozen bystanders, as the fair child lifted her lovely face of smiles to the eyes of her mother. The lady stepped feebly towards the inn, and though the landlady's heart continued to practise a sort of fluttering motion, which communicated a portion of its agitation to her hands, she waited upon her unexpected and unusual guests with a kindness and humility that fully recompensed for the expertness of a practised waiter. About half an hour after the arrival of her visiters, she was seen bustling from the door-her face, as the villagers said, bursting with importance. They were still in groups about their doors, and in the middle of the little street discussing the mysterious arrival; and, as she hastened on her mission, she was assailed with a dozen such questions as these-" Wat ye wha she is?" guess what brought her here?" "Is you bonny creature her bairn?" But to these and sundry other interrogatories, the important hostess gave for answer-" Hoot, I hae nae time to haver the noo." She stopped at a small, but certainly the most genteel house in the village, occupied by a Mrs. Douglas, who, in the country phrase, was a very douce, decent sort of an old body, and the widow of a Cameronian minister. In the summer season, Mrs. Douglas let out her little parlor to lodgers, who visited the village to seek health, or for a few weeks' retirement. She was compelled to do this from the narrowness of her circumstances; for, though she was a "clever handed woman," as her neighbors said, "she had a sair fecht to keep up an appearance onyway like the thing ava." In a few minutes, Mrs. Douglas, in a clean cap, a muslin kerchief round her neck, a quilted black bombazeen gown, and snow white apron, followed the landlady up to the inn. In a short time she returned, the stranger lady leaning upon her arm, and the lovely child leaping like a young lamb before them. Days and weeks passed away, and the good people of Thorndean, notwithstanding all their surmises and inquiries, were no wiser regarding their new visiter; all they could tion bestowed on them in reference to their beauty. The beautiful destroyer, however, lay in the mother's heart, now paling her cheeks like the early lily, and again scattering over them the rose and the rainbow. Still dreaming of recovery, about eight months after her arrival in Thorndean, death stole over like a sweet sleep. It was only a few moments before the angel burled the fatal shaft. that the truth fell upon her soul. She was stretching forth her hand to her work basket, her lovely child prattling by her knee, and Mrs. Douglas smiling like a parent upon both, striving to conceal a tear while she smiled, when the breathing of her fair guest became difficult, and the rose, which a moment before bloomed upon her countenance. vanished in a fitful streak. She flung her feeble arms around the neck of the child, who now wept upon her bosom, and exclaimed-"Oh! my Elizabeth, who will protect you now-my poor, poor orphan!" Mrs. Douglas sprang to her assistance. She said she had much to tell, and endeavored to speak; but a gurgling sound only was heard in her throat; she panted for breath; the rosy streaks, deepening into blue, came and went upon her cheeks like the midnight dances of like a little angel, her lee lane, when the brute the northern lights; her eyes flashing with wad come sleekin' down ahint her, an' giein a momentary brightness more than mortal, her a drive wi' his foot, cursed her for a little and the spirit fled. The fair orphan still lazy something I'm no gaus to name, an' rug-

came known in the village by the designation of "Mrs. Douglas' twa pictures," an appella-clung to the neck, and kissed the yet warm lips of her dead mother. As yet she was too young to see all the dreariness of the desolation around her; but she was indeed an orphan in the most cruel meaning of the word. Her mother had preserved a mystery over her sorrows and the circumstances of her life, which Mrs. Douglas had never endeavored to penetrate. And now she was left to be as a mother to the helpless child, for she knew not if she had another friend; and all that she heard of the mother's history, was recorded on the hum-ble stone which she placed over her grave— "Here resteth the body of Isabella Morton, widow of Capt. Morton, she died amongst us a stranger, but beloved." The whole property to which the fair orphan became heir by the death of her mother, did not amount to fifty pounds; and amongst the property no docu-ment was found which could throw any light upon who were her relatives, or if she had any. But the heart of Mrs. Douglas had already adopted her as a daughter; and circumscribed as her circumstances were, she trusted that He who provided food for the very birds of heaven, would provide the orphan's morsel.

Years rolled on and Elizabeth Morton grew in stature and in beauty, the pride of her pro-tector, and the joy of her age. But the in-firmities of years grew upon her foster mother, and, disabling her from following her habits of industry, stern want entered her happy cot-tage. Still Elizabeth appeared only as a thing of joy, contentment and gratitude; and often did her evening song beguile her aged friend's sigh into a smile. And to better their hard lot, she hired herself to watch a few sheep upon the neighboring hills, to the steward of a gentleman named Sommerville, who about the time of her mother's death, had purchased the estate of Thorndean. He was but little beloved, for he was but a hard master, and a bad husband; and more than once he had been seen at the hour of midnight, in the silent churchyard, standing over the grave of Mrs. Morton. This gave rise to not a few whisperings respecting the birth of poor Elizabeth. He had no children, and a nephew who resided in his house, was understood to be his William Sommerville was about a year older than our fair orphan; and ever as he could escape the eve of his uncle, he would fly to the village to seek out Elizabeth as playmate. And now, while she tended the few sheep, he would steal round the hills, and placing himself by her side, teach her the lessons he had that day been taught, while his arm in innocence rested on her neck, their glowing cheeks touching each other, and her golden curls played around them. Often were their peaceful lessons broken by the harsh voice and the blows of his uncle. But still William stole to the presence of his playmate and pupil, until he had completed his fourteenth year; when he was to leave Thorndean preparatory to entering the army. He was permitted to take a hasty farewell of the villagers, for they all loved the boy; but he went only to the cottage of Mrs. Douglas .-As he entered, Elizabeth wept, and he also burst into tears. Their aged friend beheld the yearnings of a young passion that might terminate in sorrow, and taking his hand she prayed God to prosper him, and bade him farewell. She was leading him to the door, when Elizabeth raised her tearful eyes; he beheld them, and their meaning; and, leaping forward, threw his arms round her neck, and printed the first kiss on her forehead! not forget me, Elizabeth," he cried, and hurried from the house.

Seven years from this period passed away. The lovely girl was now transformed into the elegant woman, in the summer majesty of her beauty. For four years Elizabeth had kept a school in the village, to which her gentleness and winning manners drew prosperity; and her gray haired benefactress enjoyed the reward of her benevolence. Preparations were making at Thorndean Hall for the reception of William, who was now returning as Lieutenant Sommerville. A post chaise in th village had then become a sight less rare; but several cottagers were assembled before the inn to welcome the young laird. He arrived. and with him a gentleman between forty and fifty years of age. They had merely become acquainted as travelling companions; and the stranger being on his way northward, had accepted his invitation to rest at his uncle's for few days. The footpath to the Hall lay through the churchyard, and about a quarter of a mile from the village. It was a secluded path, and Elizabeth was wont to retire to it between school hours, and frequently to spend a few moments in silent meditation over her mother's grave. She was gazing upon it when a voice arrested her attention, saying, - " Elizabeth-Miss Morton !" The speaker was Lieut. Sommerville, accompanied by his friend. To the meeting of the young lovers we shall add nothing. But the elder stranger gazed on her face and trembled, and looked on her mother's grave and wept. "Lady!"-he exclaimed, "pardon a miserable man-what was the name of your mother?—who the family of your father?— Answer me, I implore you!" "Alas! I know neither," said the wondering and now unhappy Elizabeth. " My name is Morton," cried he stranger, "I had a wife-I had a daugher once, and my Isabella's face was thy face!" While he yet spoke, the elder Sommerville drew near to meet his nephew. His eyes and the stranger's met. "Somerville" exclaimed the stranger, starting. "The same," replied the other, his brow blackening like thunder, while a trembling passed over his body. He rudely grasped the arm of his nephew, and dragged him away. The interesting stranger accompanied Elizabeth to the house of Mrs. Douglas. Painful were his inquiries; for while they kindled hope and assurance, they left all in cruel uncertainty. " Oh! sir!" said Mrs. Douglas, "if ye be the father o' my blessed bairo, I dinna wonder at ould Sommerville growing black in the face when be saw ye, for, when want came hard upon our heels, and my dear motherless and fatherless bairn was driven to herd his sheep by the brae sides-there wad the poor, dear, delicate bairn (for she was as delicate then as she is bonny now) been lying-the sheep o' feeding roun about her, and her readin' at her Bible, just ged her bonny yellow hair, till he had the half o' it torn out o' her head;—or the monster wad riven the blessed book out o' her hand, an' thrown it wi' an oath as far as he could drive. But the nephew was aye a bit fine callant;—on'y, ye ken, wi' my bairn's prospects, it wasna my part to encourage onypects, it wasna my part to encourage thing.

Lagerly did the stranger, who gave his name as Colonel Morton, hang over the fair being who had conjured up the sunshine of his youth. One by one, he was watching and tracing every remembered feature of his wife upon her face; when doubt again entered his wind and he explained in hitterness.—"Mermind, and he exclaimed in bitterness—"Mer-ciful Heaven! convince! Oh, convince me that I have found my child!" The few trink-ets that belonged to Mrs. Morton had been parted with in the depth of her poverty. At that moment, Lieutenant Sommerville hastily entered the cottage. He stated that his uncle had left the Hall, and delivered a letter from him to Col. Morton. It was of few words. and as follows:

" MORTON,-We were rivals for Isabella's love—you were made happy, and I miserable.
But I have not been unrevenged. It was I who betrayed you into the hands of the enemy.
It was I who reported you dead—who caused who betrayed you into the hands of the enemy. It was I who reported you dead—who caused the tidings to be hastened to your widowed wife, and followed them to England. It was I who poisoned the ear of her triends, until they cast her off—I dogged her to her obscurity, that I might enjoy my triumph; but death thwarted me as you had done. Yet I will do not not off more than alcohold hereafth the one act of mercy-she sleeps beneath the grave where we met yesterday; and the lady before whom you wept—is your own daugh-

He cast down the letter, and exclaimed-"My child-my long lost child!" And, in speechless joy, the father and the daughter rushed to each other's arms. Shall we add more? The elder Sommerville left his native land, which he never again disgraced with his presence. William and Elizabeth wandered by the hill-side in bliss, catching love and recollections from the scene. In a few months her father bestowed on him her hand, and Mrs. Douglas, in joy and pride, bestowed upon both Missionaries to Oregon.—A large company of Missionaries, under the charge of the Methodist Missionary Society, are to leave this port on Monday or Toesday, in the ship Lausanne, Capt. Spaulding, for Oregon Territory, via Valparaiso. A farewell meeting, in reference to their departure, was held last evening at the Methodist Church in Green street. The sending of this large expedition to Oregon, is an important event, whether considered in its religious or political bearings. Among other things, it will expedite the settlement of the Territory: and we may hope also, that it will give a tone to the moral and religious character of the people, resembling that of the early settlers of Massachusetts. An infant community is easily tlers of Massachusetts. An infant community is easily religious influences, and any attempts at I are made under great disadvantages. With all our hearts we wish success to this mission, and the noble objects which it is designed to promote. Its primary object, we believe, is to carry the Gospel to the In-

Besides the missionaries mentioned in our morning edition who are to sail in the ship Lausanne, is the Rev. Mr. Dibble, missionary of the A. B. C. F. M. and his family. He is returning to his late station at the Sand-

Currency of Virginia.-The currency in Richmo and the sea-board towns consists almost entirely of the notes of the distant and inaccessible branches. When a bank or broker sends drafts or checks for collection to Richmond, he is paid in notes of the Lynchburg, Bu-chanan, Charlestown-Kenawha, or Danville branches. If he asks for Northern funds, he is refused at any price; and if for specie, he is told he may travel on horseback over the mountains and collect it as well as

In consequence of this, the brokers here decline purchasing Virginia funds at a less discount than 5 per-cent, except the notes of the banks payable at Norfolk, Petersburg, Richmond, and Fredericksburg, which are almost entirely withdrawn from circulation .- Ib.

Parsons, the actor, Aas relapsed into histrionics, after all, notwithstanding his rather theatrical disclaimer of any such intention. He has taken an "honorable discharge" from the Methodist church, and issued his card in hac verba :

By the following certificate, it will be seen, that I have honestly withdrawn myself from the Methodist E. Church, and am no longer a member of that hoorable body.

Mr. Parsons turturer says:

My sentiments, from malignant, unforescen, unexpected, and not to be prevented circumstances, have undergone a radical change since I addressed you. Being now entirely free from all obligations, should I hereafter find it necessary, in order to supply the needful wants of those who are dependant on me for needful wants of those who are dependant on me for support, and who look to me for protection, have re-course to a profession in the exercise of which I was once most happy, I trust my friends will not like me the less, nor withhold from me their patronage, be-cause I love the Saviour of the world, and worship

Your and the Public's ob't servant,

From all that we can learn of this individual, he has hitherto been a worthy and respectable person, and entitled to the good feeling of those who knew him, but his conduct in this business is perfectly conhim, but his conduct in this business is perfectly con-temptible, and must be so looked upon not only by the respectable class of Christians who so suddenly received and so suddenly discharged him, but by the members of the theatrical profession. He will never make any more headway upon the stage, if we mis-take not the nature of his case; and the very best thing he can possibly do is to go home to Hartford, and go to work like an honest and respectable man, at the honorable occupation in which he was reared —that of a mechanic, one of the noblest employments after all, and one of which any man may be proud. after all, and one of which any man may be proud, and in which any man may make himself quite as
